SECURITY AUDITS & ASSESSMENTS

Studies have consistently shown that the greatest threat to corporate security comes from within the company. More than 80% of successful network intrusions are launched from within the target organization by disaffected employees. We will help you eliminate this internal threat by performing a full security assessment of your internal network. We will also evaluate your policies and procedures as they relate to your IT systems, your physical security and your access control measures. Our assessments are structured in accordance with the requirements of ISO 27001 and 27002 (with an optional focus on the requirements of the PCI DSS) that ensures your systems are tested comprehensively and that any proposed counter measures are targeted, cost effective, and achievable. On completion of our assessment, we will present you with a full report of our findings, together with a prioritized list of recommendations, policy references and specifications that encompass people, processes, IT systems and policy. Call today to book a free introductory meeting.

TRAINING & AWARENESS

Training is one of the most effective but also most underrated security tools available to businesses today. In many security related endeavours, success or failure is most frequently determined by the quality of training available to the participants. Our courses are custom designed by industry experts to give you the confidence, practical knowledge and experience you need to address today's complex security issues. Our trainers are specialists in their fields with many years of practical education and experience. Whether you need to present an awareness session to your executives or design and implement a fully fledged security training programme for your entire organisation, we are able to help you. We offer courses worldwide and each training class is individually structured to the host organization's specific needs. Please contact us for a current list of course outlines.

LITIGATION PREPAREDNESS & SUPPORT

Being served with an electronic discovery notice or data preservation order can signal the beginning of a process that could cost your organisation millions of dollars. We have in-house consultants and global partners who can help you prepare in advance for such an eventuality. We can also provide onsite assistance to guide your legal and technical staff through the complex process of legally defensible, cost effective data preservation, collection and analysis. These skills are rarely available in house, even in very large organisations, but our experienced consultants can offer you timely, confidential, pragmatic advice on dealing with these issues. If required, we can also provide a complete electronic discovery project team to augment your in-house staffing. Effective preparation and an informed response can mean the difference between winning and losing your case. Call us in confidence to discuss your requirements.

INVESTIGATIONS & IT FORENSICS

Our investigations and IT forensics team is trained to provide analysis and support for both criminal and commercial investigations. This offering is designed to give you the ability to investigate policy and or legal infractions in a structured and legally defensible manner. We have both the expertise and the technology to ensure that known or suspected security breaches within your organisation are given the professional attention they deserve. As an extension of our investigations activities, our consultants can also assist you with the development of policies that enable fair, effective and enforceable action in the event of non-compliance. Strong and consistent policies are often a pre-requisite to the successful prosecution of internal security breaches and should be considered a core component of any organisation's employee manual. If you already have effective corporate policies in place, contact us to discuss our range of compliance monitoring technologies, products and services.

DISASTER RECOVERY & BUSINESS CONTINUITY PLANNING

A well publicised survey by the Gartner Group indicates that nearly 40% of companies go out of business within 5 years of suffering a disaster. While most of us tend to think of disasters in terms of local, catastrophic events, our increasing dependence on global commerce dramatically increases corporate risk. For example, businesses are now critically dependent on outsourced labour, complex and extended supply chains, changing regulatory environments and finely honed process efficiencies; all of these factors contribute to our increasing dependence on corporate IT and communications infrastructures. Our consultants will lead your organisation through the process of identifying and assessing key corporate risks, analysing the effectiveness of current management controls and then developing clear action plans and recommendations for risk mitigation. If you would like to understand how this service can benefit you organisation, please call us today to book an introductory meeting.
